UPCOMING MEETING

July 10  6:00pm
The Club will bring plates, utensils, napkins, cups, soda, and ice.

JUNE MEETING MINUTES / JERSEYS

The June meeting was somewhat somber as we discussed the Joe Hiney’s tragedy. It was decided to donate $500 to the T.A. Scholarship Fund that is being created in his name. If anyone wants to write about Joe, please send it to Neups and he’ll get it in the next newsletter. We’d like to do a memorial issue.

The jerseys should be in shortly. As soon as they are in, we will be contacting those who ordered one and letting you know the final cost and how to get yours.

BICYCLING IN BLOOMSBURG, PA

After visiting Bloomsburg for work purposes, I thought it would be a good place to try some bicycling. As luck would have it, the League of American Bicyclists was holding one of their annual Rallies there this year. So I decided to go. With the Rally, you get a place to stay, lots of food, and pre-scouted, marked routes. Nothing to do but go and ride.

I arrived a little late the first day to get in a ride, but that worked out fine as I avoided the 93° heat and the subsequent shower. But I got to the lecture from the bison lady. I found out that bison is lower in fat and cholesterol than even chicken and turkey! She even brought in a bison chip clock. Nothing is wasted with those animals.

The second day I decided on the century route. The group started strong with about 25 riders. And the first ten miles were flat. But then we started our first of many climbs for the day. At the end of that climb, we were down to only six riders. So we plugged along, enjoying the scenery. A goose hissed at us as we went by his pond. One person later said he spotted a bear. I can’t confirm that sighting, but I did see a wood sculptor that had carved some bears out of tree trunks.

Feeling the effects of the prior day’s ride, I chose the 70-mile option for Sunday. But the hills were not to be denied. The start was fine, as it was flat to downhill. But, then again, the climbs came upon us. Their climbs tend to be longer than what we have around here. And there are a lot of sectional hills. These are hills that climb for a while, level off a little, then climb some more. One section this day had a five-step sectional climb. That sure can wear on you after a while. Comedy and music were showcased during the nighttime activities for the 675 registrants.

Monday started with rain that looked like it would last all day. So I packed up my things and said goodbye to a pretty good long weekend in Pennsylvania.

9th ANNUAL SHENANDOAH VALLEY BIKE FESTIVAL

The Shenandoah Valley Bike Festival will be taking place the weekend of July 28,29, and 30. The festival will start at Bridgewater College on Saturday, July 29. The seven rides being offered on Saturday range from the requisite century to gentle 20-ish mile loops around the Bridgewater area. In addition to the festival on Saturday, there will be a club ride at 5:30 p.m. on Friday and a “volunteer recognition” ride on Sunday morning. The festival continues to be an exceptional bargain, with the fully supported rides and this year includes a canvas Festival bag with the $15 registration fee. To register for the festival, please stop by your local bike shop or email: hhayes@bridgewater.edu.

Once again, the assistance of club members is needed to make this a successful festival. There are opportunities to serve as a ride leader, help with rest stops, help with road markings, or help with other ride support. If you would like to guide bikers through our beautiful valley as a ride leader, contact Marcia Lamphier (289-6712). The festival is a great opportunity to showcase the Shenandoah Valley Bicycle Club and ensure that all of our bicycling guests enjoy their visit to "our roads". The $15 registration fee is waived for festival volunteers.

Below is a list of scheduled rides:

- CENTURY - 7:00 A.M. (100 MILES)
- METRIC CENTURY - 7:30 A.M. (65 MILES)
- UNION SPRINGS CREEK RIDE - 8:00 A.M. (22 MILES)
- WESTWARD HO - 8:30 A.M. (31 MILES)
- BASE OF THE MOUNTAIN - 9:00 A.M. (40 MILES)
- NATURAL CHIMNEYS - 10:00 A.M. (32 MILES)
- COUNTY LINE – 1:30 P.M. (20 MILES)

HATS Again

I've been doing some digging on how our various governments run our roads, and it's been an education. For example, the controversial Harrisonburg loop is allegedly necessary to accommodate traffic in the future. But the folks at VDOT who are behind the study base their conclusions on the assumption that the existing traffic system in Harrisonburg is operating efficiently. Now, anyone who has driven through the Burg knows this is not the case, so it seems to me this entire model is based on faulty assumptions. That's a very expensive house of cards.

Bridgewater to the Burg

Bob Holton, Superintendent of Bridgewater, is pushing hard for a combined bicycle/buggy path connecting Bridgewater and Harrisonburg. This will be separate from U.S. 42, but will connect at strategic places. While many cyclists (me included) would prefer bike lanes on U.S. 42 to a bike path off of U.S. 42, the unique combination of bicycles and buggies in that section of the County change the dynamic, so that a path is more viable there. Mr. Holton has plans to eventually extend this to Broadway, so the open meeting about a year ago in Spring Creek has proved to be productive.

Access Road

There is also a proposed "industrial access road" east of Bridgewater (basically connecting 257 to 42 near Turner Ashby High School) which will be equipped with either two 5 foot bicycle lanes, one on each side, or one 10 foot bicycle path on one side of the road. I am pushing for the former. I suggest you contact Bob Holton if you have an opinion.

U.S. 33 East

Joe Hiney's tragic death illustrates the danger of that section of U.S. 33 to bicyclists. I originally wrote VDOT and the Rockingham County Board of Supervisors about that stretch of road in December of 1998, and I have just sent them another letter urging them to begin the process of adding bicycle lanes from Harrisonburg to Skyline Drive. Doing so would increase the safety of both utilitarian and recreational bicyclists, and attract bicycle tourism dollars to the area (imagine a safe climb from the Valley floor to Skyline Drive). Since such a project is tailor-made for TEA-21 funding, up to 80% of the cost would be covered by external funds. So what's stopping them? You are! Write or call the Board of Supervisors and Dennis Morrison, VDOT Staunton District Administrator. If you don't do it, don't complain about it.

Transportation

I will be bringing some of my ideas about transportation to the July meeting of the Harrisonburg Transportation and Safety Board. Wish me luck.

WANNABES

Are you a C-pace rider (10 to 12 mph) who would like to become faster, smoother, and/or more efficient but you're not really sure how to accomplish your goals? Have you just gotten into cycling and want to see what cycling with a small group is all about? Then come out and join these rides. Together we will work, train, and have a good time on our bikes and hopefully, help you meet your cycling goals. We will talk about some of the ways that may improve your riding skills and your speed—techniques that have worked for leaders and that they continue to use. We will share with each other our experiences and help each other to become better riders. The rides will start at a C-pace with a distance of 10-15 miles. At a later date, the speed and/or distance will gradually increase (along with a more challenging terrain) based on the needs to the group. These rides are learning/training rides but also FUN rides and at no time will anyone be dropped. So come out, train, learn, and have fun!! We promise that everyone will learn at least one new way to improve your cycling skills. Check the monthly Ride Schedule for the dates/location/time. Call Alice Stecker (564-1611) or Marcia Lamphier (289-6712) for more information.

A DAY'S RIDE

Did you ever use the expression "it's a day's drive"? In older times, they used "a day's ride", meaning by horseback. But did you ever try to use it for bicycling? I read an article a while ago about a guy who uses the summer solstice to gauge what a day's ride is. He would start at sunrise and stop at sunset. The miles traveled would constitute his "day's ride". Well, I've often thought about that idea. And this year, after doing some good weekend riding (high mileage both days), and doing 61 miles one day after work, I had the idea that my time was now to see what a day's ride was.

I kicked around the idea in my head that I could ride back to Allentown, PA. Straight up 11 to Harrisburg, PA. Then onto 22 into Fredericksburg, PA. From there it's backroads I've ridden in the past to get to Allentown. My mapping program told me it was 260 miles. Doing some quick math, I didn't think I'd make it the whole way, so I called my brother and asked if he'd like to take a drive and help me on my quest. He agreed and I set the date for four days later on June 24th. Had I given myself more time to plan, I may not have even attempted the ride.

After a surprisingly good night's sleep (usually I toss and turn before a big ride), I awoke Saturday with some nervousness. But all signals said "go", so I started off at 5:38am. The cool air gave rise to some patchy fog, but the riding felt good, knowing the afternoon would get hot. Route 11 is actually a nice little road, until about 10am when the traffic starts picking up.

I made Winchester by 9am and refilled my water bottles. Hagerstown, MD was made around 11:30. 106 miles down. Good average speed (18.3mph). I'm pleased, and pleasantly surprised. I was expecting more hills, but 11 is relatively flat. Slowdowns occurred because of traffic lights. Route 11 seems to have quite a few. The wind was non-existent. After this point, I'd be in uncharted mileage territory. I lingered longer at this stop for a sandwich and more liquid. Pushing off again at noon, I had a small crosswind pick up, but just until I wound my way out of town.

After crossing the Potomac, it's one long, subtle climb to Harrisburg, with small hills intermixed. But now the wind started, and the way I liked it - from the southwest. I was surprised to be traveling at 20-26mph at times. The temperature had now reached 87. I reached Shippensburg, where my brother attended college, after two more hours. I should have stopped, but ended up pushing into Carlisle. The cold fluids tasted good, though I was beginning to like warm Gatorade. Of course, I was also juxtaposing "Take Me Home, Country Roads" with "Pour Some Sugar On Me" and believing they had the same musical structure. It's 3pm and I've done 160 miles so far. Still feeling good, but the rest sure helps.

Off again, and Carlisle's downtown was closed for a celebration. I lost my route for a few blocks, but found it again in a few minutes. I've decided on Route 614. It looked less traveled than 11, plus it might save some miles. My mind kept saying that I'd be going downhill soon because I was going towards the Susquehanna River. But the road kept saying "up". Through Camp Hill and a quick detour to my friend's house in New Cumberland. 4:30 and 180 miles. I had hoped he'd be home, but no one ever came to the door. So I continued into Pennsylvania's state capitol. Coming out of Harrisburg, I continued onto Route 22. I was hoping to refresh myself before getting out of the city, but I didn't like the looks of the neighborhood. So I pushed on. My mistake. Route 22 was a major road before I-78 came into existence. Now the gas stations/food marts were at the interchanges. So I pushed on. At 190 miles, I was getting tired. A little later I went to check the odometer to mark my double century, but I had already passed it. My water bottles were almost empty. The next stop I knew was further than I wanted it to be. But luckily, a place to stop came into view. It was 6:15 and I had 203 miles under me. It was time for a Yoo-Hoo. And time to call my brother. My back hurt, my shoulders hurt, my neck hurt. But mostly, the balls of my feet hurt, especially the right foot. I had a few more miles in me, but I figured my brother should start driving and find me.

Back on the bike, and for the first time my butt hurt to sit. It didn't help that the road had turned into a typical beat-up Pennsylvanian road. I did another ten miles into Fredericksburg. I had had enough. I found a phone and called my brother on his cell phone to give him a landmark to find me. It was just after 7pm. I had another hour and a half of daylight, but I had also had enough. My goal was at least 200 miles. I had 213 and still had my legs and knees. Another twenty miles or so wasn't worth it. Just over twelve hours on the bike at an average speed of 17.5mph.

My brother showed up after about twenty minutes with food and clothing. We put the bike in the car, I washed up and changed, and we headed back to Harrisonburg. My day's ride was over.
