ADVOCACY

Transportation Goals:
On January 29, CHANGE held a press conference in which they outlined their goals for 2001. I presented the transportation goals. My four main points were: (1) hire a staff transportation planner, (2) more aggressively implement the bicycle plan, (3) develop a Harrisonburg walkability plan, and (4) work cooperatively with the county on transportation issues. Bob Bersson gave a wonderful slide presentation promoting downtown beautification and the proposed Blacks Run Greenway (see below). The press conference received positive coverage on TV-3 and in the DNR.
Blacks Run Greenway:
Plans for the linear park paralleling Blacks Run have proceeded. The plan is to have a biking/walking trail along Blacks Run and to have "pocket parks" in various places along the way, similar to the park behind the Shenandoah Bicycle Company. A group of citizens and city staff have been meeting regularly to work out the details of this public/private partnership, and the plan has received positive press in the DNR. Talk to Stin Lenkerd for details or if you are interested in helping to make this greenway a reality.

Critical Mass:
Harrisonburg's monthly critical mass rides have continued through the winter, despite a consistently poor turnout by Club members. The 5-mile rides leave at 1pm on the last Saturday of the month from the upper level of the Water Street parking deck. See harrisonburg_cm.tripod.com for more information.

Joe Hiney ride:
Plans for a Joe Hiney Memorial Ride have begun. The ride, which will take place in late May or early June (roughly one year from the date Joe was struck and killed on 33 East), will be the same format as the critical mass rides. It will likely start and end at Turner Ashby High School. I have contacted someone there, and there could be a large number of students participating. If you have input on this, contact Marcia, Neups, or me.

CAP proposal:
The Community Alliance for Preservation (CAP), which formed in opposition to VDOT's proposed "loop road," has come up with an alternative plan. One component of this plan involves moving the railroad tracks that parallel South Main Street from where they are to somewhere north of town, and using the rail bed for a walking/biking trail. This would provide a safe route for younger or less experienced riders, similar to the Blacks Run Greenway. Contact Julie Burtner for more information.

New elementary school:
So, what does the location of Harrisonburg's next elementary school have to do with advocacy? The Harrisonburg School Board voted (somewhat prematurely, it would seem) to NOT use the Simm's School, which is conveniently located in the northeast section of the city, for its new elementary school. Instead, they may be building the next school in some undeveloped corner of the city. Residential growth would then be induced near the school's location. Putting classist/racist complaints aside (the Simm's school was Harrisonburg's "black" school before desegregation), it makes more sense to put a school where people already live. This gives the students an opportunity to walk/ride to school. Sticking it on the outskirts of the city forces most people to drive or take a bus.

Transportation & Safety:
I have been appointed by City Council to Harrisonburg's Transportation and Safety Commission. I hope to provide a non-motorist's perspective at the planning stage of any relevant city improvements.

CROSS TRAINING

I had to have surgery in early November, on my right foot to remove some bone. The podiatrist told me I needed to step off the bike for a while. And my back was giving me a fit from riding more than ever this year (over 5,000 miles for the first time). I had talked earlier in the year to Les Welch and my family physician about my nagging back. I'm in good health with no back injuries. They both basically told me the same thing: cross-train. For seven straight years, my sole form of exercise has been cycling. They suggested my upper body needed some work. Enter Merck's fitness center. Shortly after my surgery, I was able to give my legs/foot a break and start working on my upper body in the new Fitness Center that Merck built for their employees. It's a nice center with all kinds of cardio and weight-training equipment. There's a sound system, fans, locker rooms, and showers. And best of all, it's free! I really did need the upper-body workout...my wife has bigger biceps than I do! Within four or five workouts, I could begin to feel a little difference in upper-body strength. It's been "just what the doctor ordered". I believe that cross-training is a good thing for me and I will probably work on upper body strength through February, at least. By then, I know I'll be itching to get back on the bike.

What I have read from various magazines and through internet bicycle newsgroups is that cyclists who don't want to add a lot of pounds from weight training (like us, so we can get up these hills around here) should do less weights with more reps. This method will tone your body without building bulk. However, after being so overweight most of my life, I sure haven't found the cure for the stomach flab leftover from losing the weight. Many cyclists have suggested crunches to me and I do them, although I can't say I enjoy them. But then, in many respects, it has been harder to enter the weight room than to just keep riding through the winter. I have been sore at times from using muscles I didn't realize I had. I purposely have started out pretty easy with weight training and have only increased the weights a little since I started eight weeks ago. I'm not out to strain anything or need muscle relaxers. I want to keep this as natural and enjoyable as possible. I'm sure I'll be a little slower on the bike come Spring, but hopefully, within a short period of time, I can meet up and maybe surpass my average mph goals because of the upper body conditioning from the winter. I have heard that a strong upper torso will transfer more power to the legs and allow for stronger, more comfortable cycling.

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

Helmets are required on all club rides.

SATURDAYS

12 noon. Winter Training Rides. This winter we will bring back a regular series of rides for those of you who will not let a little bad weather interrupt your cycling enjoyment. We will meet on a weekly basis for rides of one to two hours in length--weather dictates the distance. Ride leaders will include Marcia, Bill, and Marshall. First ride will be on January 8th and the series will be continued through March. Major snowfall means cancellation of the ride and cross-country skiing instead. Call Marcia (432-3312), Bill (828-6635), or Marshall (828-2950) for location and other details. Shake off that winter feeling of blah & join us!

April 21 Cycle for the Children. Citizens Against Sexual Assault (CASA) of Harrisonburg will be hosting a bike ride in honor of April's Child Abuse Awareness Month. CASA is a non-profit grassroots organization dedicated to serving those that have been affected by sexual violence. The bike ride is a fundraiser as well as an awareness event. Each registered rider must raise a minimum of $150.00. A large portion of the money raised will go to CASA's Child Advocacy Fund. This will allow for support for our TeenLine, educational programs for youth, as well as services for child victims of sexual abuse. The remaining proceeds will help with the operational costs of CASA. If you are interested in riding in CASA's first ever Cycle for the Children or if you are willing to volunteer, please contact Lacey Midkiff at CASA: 432-6430 or e-mail lmidkiff@rica.net.
