MARCH MEETING MINUTES

The March meeting of the SVBC returned to Luigi’s back room. The attendance records of previous months remain in tact with only four members present. I missed the treasurer’s report, however if my memory serves me correctly it was in the range of $7,900. The club received a thank you and contribution acknowledgement from the Bridgewater Rescue Squad for the club’s donation of $100. Thomas Jenkins and Chris Scott gratefully acknowledged the support of the club in donating $330 for their attendance at the National Bike Summit in Washington, D.C. A recap is included in the March newsletter.

Although not part of the March meeting, but club business none-the-less, the club is going to purchase a hard sided bicycle travel case for use by club members. Currently the case is stored at Neups’ house with subsequent storage to be at the "last used" house. If any club member wishes to borrow the case contact any club officer for its location.

Our Community Place will be having a Festival meeting on March 22nd to discuss the 2004 Shenandoah Bicycle Festival. Any club member interested in helping OCP is encouraged to attend. Contact Dan Finseth for a time and place.

By the time the March newsletter is published the SMBC will have held a club meeting to detail steps being taken for tax exempt status, including board members and officers. There will be more information on this meeting in the April newsletter.

Wednesday night fun rides begin in April, see the Events section for more details. These rides are social in nature and everyone is encouraged to attend. Race numbers will not be given out.

This just in, May’s meeting will be a slide show by Rich Harris of his trip to Thailand. Look for an announcement of time and place through e-mails and the club message board. If you haven’t registered as a member of the mail group and wish to do so the web address is http://groups.yahoo.com/group/svbikeclub/.

The next meeting will be April 12th, 7:30 at Luigi’s. No plans now for pre-meeting rides during DST, however if there is enough interest the rides can be restarted. Check with Marcia if interested.

The meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
Marshall Hammond
Secretary SVBC

STOP THE PRESSES
If this newsletter seems a little late getting out, it is. I’ve had quite a bit on my plate the last couple weeks. I’ve been trying to get in training time for a brevet with my brother – 183 miles in one shot. That’s not bad, except that it’s on May 15th. But the kicker has been that, barring a bad inspection, I’ll be moving to some new digs. It’ll only be four blocks, but all the planning and things to take care of have already been swimming through my brain. This also means that my house will be for sale. So if you’ve been looking for a well-kept, two-bedroom, six-room Cape Cod style home, get in touch with me.

ADVOCACY
The Harrisonburg City Council has adopted the new Comprehensive Plan at last Tuesday’s meeting. The document can be found on the city’s web site - a direct link is http://www.ci.harrisonburg.va.us/commdev/CompPlan/CompPlanFrame.htm - and paper copies are available at the library, the municipal building, the community development office, and the chamber of commerce.
There are 16 stated "goals," each with a list of "objectives." The goal that most overtly deals with cycling is:
Goal 8: To develop a safe and convenient transportation system serving all modes of travel, such as automobile, pedestrian, bicycle, and transit.
And its two most relevant objectives are:
Objective 8.2: To promote bicycling as an alternative mode of transportation. (e.g., implementation of the Harrisonburg Bicycle Plan, bicycle facility requirements in new developments, etc.)
Objective 8.7: To improve the safety of all modes of travel.
Many, if not all, of the public input meetings for the Comp Plan were dominated by pedestrian and bicycle concerns from the public, and this is reflected in the plan, although not as strongly as I would have liked. Also, since the Harrisonburg Bicycle Plan was adopted in early 2000 and the last Comp Plan update was 1998, this is the first Comp Plan that officially recognizes the Bike Plan. That gives the Bike Plan a few more teeth.
Other components of the plan, such as land use guidelines, will have a less direct impact on cycling, but still a positive impact. We’ll see how closely the Comp Plan is followed between now and the next update.

OLYMPIC HOPEFULS
Ken Bell is making a documentary on Jeremiah Bishop and Sue Haywood as they try to make the 2004 Olympic Team. This is going to be a huge project but hope to appeal to a large audience. You can follow their project, and Sue and Jeremiah at their new website, www.trektoathens.com.
The Shenandoah Mountain Bike Club held an organizational meeting at the home of Thomas and Julie Jenkins on March 17, 2004. There were 23 members present. Thomas Jenkins opened the meeting by explaining the club’s effort to incorporate and become a 501 C3 non-profit organization. Ryan Ketchum has been preparing the paperwork necessary to accomplish both tasks. When the club obtains the non-profit status it can apply for grants and other funding and it is felt better support mountain biking in the area.

The positions necessary to continue the move to incorporate consisted of board members and officers. Discussion on the number of board members and officers resulted in the decision to have 5 board members with three members remaining on the board for 2 years and two members holding one year terms. The club will have a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and member coordinator. Additionally other members will hold the position of web master, newsletter, and data base provider. There were numerous members who had expressed an interest in holding the positions described. Volunteers are needed for Sunday June 20th from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. and Monday June 21st 5:30 a.m. until approximately 9 a.m. Bike Virginia will donate to the club’s treasury for this service. The SVBC’s message board was made available for SMBC members to use to post messages of interest to cyclists. The message board can be found at http://groups.yahoo.com/group/svbikeclub/. Persons posting messages will need to become a member of the group.

The meeting was ended, basically because there wasn’t any more beverage or pizza. Thanks, Thomas and Julie for the use of your house.

TRANSPORTATION BOARD APPROVES NEW POLICY FOR VDOT TO IMPROVE BICYCLE AND PEDESTRIAN ACCESS

RICHMOND - The Commonwealth Transportation Board (CTB) approved today a new policy aimed at providing bicyclists and pedestrians greater access to safe transportation on roadways across the state.

"Walking and biking are important modes of transportation. In order to ensure greater efficiency in our transportation network, these modes must be considered and planned in coordination with other transportation improvements," said Transportation Secretary Whitt Clement. "The CTB policy adopted today is intended to ensure that accommodation for these modes is incorporated in the decision-making process for Virginia's transportation network."

Clement added, "At Governor Warner's direction, we are taking a broader view of Virginia's transportation network and in doing so, we will further enhance the quality of life throughout the Commonwealth."

VDOT partnered with citizen and local government groups to develop the new policy. Highlights from the policy include:

- A framework through which VDOT will accommodate bicyclists and pedestrians, including pedestrians with disabilities, along with motorized transportation modes in the planning, funding, design, construction, operation, and maintenance of Virginia's transportation network to achieve a safe, effective, and balanced multimodal transportation system.

- Sidewalks, bike lanes, shared-use paths or other accommodations will be considered in the design of all new highway and major reconstruction projects, depending on safety issues and the need.

Improving access for bicyclists and pedestrians is part of the Warner administration's efforts to better incorporate and integrate all modes of transportation into planning and project development.

FRANCE (part 4, the final)

July 18 – Day 14 – Cold, no, hot
The day started cool, only 51° at 8am, so I dawdled through a big breakfast and my packing. I started out solo again today, climbing the Col de Romeyere (1074m/3523') before dropping to the Isere River. By then it had warmed enough to shed my vest and warmers. Erik caught up to me in St. Laurent-du-Pont, where I enjoyed a drink and he enjoyed a chocolate éclair. From there we entered the Gorges du Guiers Mort, with its shade and wonderful scenery. The end of the gorges marked the beginning of our next climb up the Col du Cucheron (1139m/3736’). This col started steady, but became a double chevron near the end. The downhill brought us overlooking St. Pierre-d’Entrant, where we stopped for lunch. It was then on to the Gorges du Guiers Vif. Rolling hills brought us to Lac d’Aiguebelette, which we circled counterclockwise. The Col de la Crusille (573m/1879’) was next, on which Charlie battled Jim, followed by a good downhill run towards St. Genix-sur-Guiers. It was then just a short ride up the main highway and then a sharp uphill to our hotel in Champagneux. It was an 87 mile, 7100’ of climbing day, rewarded with a dip in the pool and a room that was extremely spacious.

July 19 – Day 15 – Almost over

It gets hot early when you’re not in the high mountains. We had to stop several times in the first half hour, trying to decipher the map and cue sheet. I felt good going up the Col du Tournier (788m/2585’). Trying to get to the next col by following the cue sheets was another effort in futility. Several French riders let me know I couldn’t get there from where I was. We ended up going back down to the main road and circling around on more traffic-laden roads. Eventually we reached the Col du Chat (638m/2093’). We were now above Aix-les-Bains and the Lac du Bourget. The road heading north had some very good views of both. We broke off from the lake and circled down to follow the Cal de Savieres, where boaters were lazily heading down the river. Upon reaching the north end of the lake I headed up the east side by climbing the Col Belvedere (724m/2375’). This was mostly a double chevron in the heat of the day, but with a redeeming quality that you got terrific views of the lake from the other side.

We followed the Nephaz River into Rumilly and had a nice lunch, Randy, Scott, Scott, and myself. Charlie found us a little while later and joined us. Then we followed the Fier River, wishing in the heat that some of that water were upon us. In Seyssel I actually stopped at the water fountain and splashed some on me, though the relief didn’t last too long once I started out again. More gentle climbing, with views again of Mont Blanc, finally brought us out to the national route and we only had a few more miles into Eloise. Thus ended the 75 miles and 6500’ of climbing for the day.

July 20 – Day 16 – The final ride

Last night and this morning I had decided on one of the shorter routes for today, being somewhat tired, needing to pack the bike, etc. Yet, when we gathered outside the hotel, I decided to take the long route and finish with 900 miles for my tour. I started with Charlie and Chin, but we had a disagreement on the route (those maps and cues again) and I decided to just keep riding instead of agonizing over the direction. I eventually came out on the road I needed, gently climbing to St. Germain-de-Joux. Entering the town took a quick burst of power uphill, then the road continued its gentle climb through the Gorges du Semine, a nicely shaded route. I reunited with Charlie and Chin here. After some forest roads, we stopped in Tres-la-Ville for water, talking with a couple of older gentlemen near the water fountain. We continued climbing and descending, arriving in Mijoux, where they were having a festival. After some refreshment, it was time to do our last climb, the Col de la Fauchille (1320m/4330’). The uphill was gentle and the downhill fast, with many good views. I continued to Bossy, had one last stop at a patisserie, and rode back to the hotel. This gave me 62 miles for the day and another 6000’ of climbing. So for the second week, I rode 480 miles and did 42,800’ of climbing. This gave me a grand total of 902 miles and 92,600’ of climbing.

July 21 – Day 17 – Home

All the beautiful sun we had turned to thunderstorms as I got to the Geneva airport. I was quite glad it held off for us for two weeks. I breezed through what little security there was and had breakfast while waiting for my flight to London. In London’s Gatwick airport, they have a hub where most of the shops are. Thus, all the travelers were congregated in one place. It made for a busy atmosphere. Once we boarded the plane there, another storm was across the Atlantic. The captain let us know we’d be detained while they worked out new schedules. The delay went from one-half to one hour, then up to four hours, down to two hours, and then we had the word we’d be departing. The delay ended up lasting only one hour. With the adjusted flight path, we got to Pittsburgh only forty minutes late. On my way home I forgot that I picked up six hours, didn’t sleep, and got to Pittsburgh before realizing that by the time I got home I would be awake twenty-four hours. I tried napping in Pittsburg, but to not much avail. I flew to Shenandoah, Robin drove me home, and I crashed heavily. My tour was complete.
